Alexandria Gazette

SATURDAY EVENING, AUGUST 2, 1879.

IMMORALITY IN HIGH PLACES, -I do not intend to throw a stone at Mille. Bernhardt 'She and G.orge Elict, and other eminent persons who defy the customs of society, are competent to judge of right and wrong, and are free to act. I do not judge them. But what I wish to point out is the social phenomenon presented when the leaders of a society which crushes thousands of poor girls in the mire for illegitimate sexual relations should at the same time lavish admiration upon women of the same character who happen to have talent.

Sarah Bernhardt has never been married; she has four children; she brought to London with her, and took in every fine house where she was entertained, a bright boy, who called her "Mademoiselle, my mamma." There was no concealment whatever. Fashionable London was at her feet. It was amply demonstrated that fashionable English society does not really respect the custom which it professes to hold essential. The sanctity of marriage becomes more and more athing for the poor and ignorant—like orthodoxy. It is well enough for common people to fear hell, etc. This kind of talk has long teen familiar in the matter of religious dogmas. but it is now seen to be the underlying senti-ment about the marriage dogma also.

Sarah Bernhardt is a woman of real genius.

I believe her to be a woman of heart, and that the has obeyed her heart in these matters where-in it is said to to be more hely to obey custom. I can understand how the splender of genius displayed in her Phedre could hide a multitude of sins, even for the rigidly righteous.

But what I have observed of her career among the aristocrats of London leads me to feel that it is not through everlooking her sins or forgetting them, but, to some extent, because of them, that she has enjoyed a brilliant apotheosis. The constant gossip has lent a piquancy to her presence, and the enthusiasm has been quite as great among those who could not understand or appreciate her performances.—M. D. Conway in Cincinnati Commercial.
